Professional Profile

As former head of a large nonprofit and past Chair of the Lupus Foundation of America's National Board of Directors, Cindy Coney is widely recognized for her work in health education and specifically her pioneering work in resiliency. A highly skilled speaker and trainer, she travels extensively sharing her first-hand patient perspective (she was diagnosed with the autoimmune disease lupus as a young woman) and professional expertise with thousands, delivering inspirational keynote speeches and educational training to patient, healthcare and nonprofit organizations worldwide, and acting as a patient advocate to government, pharmaceutical companies and research groups.

An articulate, educated, and passionate voice representing patients, Cindy has testified before the FDA Advisory Panel to help secure the first new drug for lupus in 50 years. She has been selected numerous times to serve alongside doctors and researchers on both the U.S. Department of Defense Patient Reviewer for the Peer Reviewed Medical Research Program and the International Task for to Define Remission in SLE.

A resiliency expert, Cindy's unique combination of personal, professional and academic experience offers the entire healthcare community, from patients to those who support and treat them, an arsenal of resources, strategies and responses to the challenge of treating and living with chronic illness. Committed to the idea that strengthening individual resiliency skills can greatly impact patient outcomes, her workshops, conference presentations and retreats offer "how-to" action steps for patients learning to live the best life possible despite illness. Based on resiliency research, the federally recognized SAMSHA Model Program curriculum she helped developed continues to positively impact the lives of hundreds of thousands nationwide.

Cindy's energetic, humorous and relatable personal style combines with professional experience and expertise to engage both patients and providers alike. Her topics include the most relevant and timely issues in managing and living with chronic illness.

In addition to public speaking, Cindy is a commissioned artist working in acrylic paints from her home studio in Florida. Whether making fine art or delivering an inspirational keynote speech, both outlets provide her with endless opportunities for creativity and expression.
